CLASS PROPHECY

It is the year nineteen hundred and fifty-five. Seated at a desk in the head office of the United States Patent Bureau is Nancy Hammond, who is satisfying her desire to be an artist by drawing conclusions. The problem on hand is whether to buy a copy of the learned Marianna Moore's dictionary in order to improve her still faulty spelling or to purchase one of Jean Strickland's latest cookbooks, which are very rare because Gene Starcher has been busy selling them to cannibals in the South Pacific as she pursues an elusive microbe.

At the next desk in the office—for the patent bureau has two top executives—sits Betty Duty doing her duty with a realistic and unprejudiced mind. She has just asked Barbara Barnes, applying for a patent for "Bigger and Better Barnes," why such "Barnes" are necessary; and Miss Barnes is replying that she needs them because she is raising so many "Gibson Girls." Poor Betty Irby, ever popular with the kiddies, is vainly trying to keep them in her kindergarten.

The door opens; and the chief office boy (rather, girl), Jean Roberts, brings in the morning mail. Miss Roberts has risen from her honorable position of messenger and secretary for the student representatives back at Salem to the famous office boy of the patent executives and head of the powerful "O.B.U."—office Boys' Union. The letters are in a wooden box reminiscent of Salem; and great is the surprise when the first letter turns out to be from an 'ole schoolmate, Skippy Pfanstiehl, wanting a patent on new cold resistant red wool underwear to be worn by hostellers in the Himalayas. Skippy says this application is urgent because Mary Lynn Hogg wants this wool for her knitting and the knitting isn't for the Red Cross. This is put with several other applications for wool, including one from Mary Lou Fields, who is designing Admirals' uniforms.

Finally the morning ends; and the weary executives, hoping for a minute of rest, go to a neighboring cafe. Peering through the dense crowd and the smoke screen (foot-long cigarettes are now the rage), they see Jerry Worsham seated alone in one corner. There is, however, no extra space at her table because it is literally covered with all kinds of food. Jerry, having become an expert connoisseur, is hard at work doing what she always loved best—eating.

Having at length located a table, the two sit down and open the morning paper. On the very first page is a picture of "Miss Pin-up of 1955," Ruth Adams, who is now posing for Jon Whitcombe. After ordering, Duty picks up a copy of "Life." Under "Letters to the Editor" she discovers that some "Life" readers are arguing about a new rule in bridge. The editor is appealing to Mary Louise Powe, bridge expert, to settle the question please. In the main section of the magazine, there is a big picture of Ruth Womble, the social butterfly, flitting from one party to another. She is accompanied by some man named Chalky. Further on, "Life" goes to Wake Forest and whom does it find there but Pat Shull, the new house mother of the A K II.

Suddenly, from a nearby booth, comes the voice of Jean Dunlap saying, "My new device is wonderful—a stretching machine to pull pounds from the horizontal to the vertical."

"Well for my part," replies the voice of Bettie Long, "I'd rather be Nott than Long."

Returning from lunch, the patent heads are surprised to see a dim light showing under the door. Silently they turn the knob, open the door, and see a shadowy figure crawling over the floor. It is Helen Kahn, trying to find out what kind of rugs the government is using.

Unexpectedly there is a great uproar in the hall outside: "But cats aren't allowed in here, Miss."

"How silly, don't make me dilly-dally. I have various and sundry things to do." In walks someone drooling in furs—live cat fur mostly. Why, it's the "Miss Efficiency" of the year—Harriet Atwood—who wants to borrow a pair of scissors to cut government red tape. Harriet says that on a recent trip to New York she met Betsy Smith-Vaniz, now giving lessons on how to be a "fascinating lady." "Betsy," Harriet whispers confidently, "has been barred from the local night clubs because at sight of her all the men swoon to the floor, blocking the doors and creating a fire hazard."

The telephone rings and Nancy reaches for it. "Is this the patent bureau?" demands a familiar voice. It's Nona McClure, wanting a patent on some improved bathtubs made to order. It seems that there are a few mice at the house where Lindsay Tate, famous diplomat, is living; and Lindsay has commissioned Nona, well acquainted with the requirements for comfort in bathtubs, to design her some, so that she may have one in every room. "Safety first" is Lindsay's motto.

At last five o'clock rolls around again and business is over. To home for the tired executives. But just a minute! In burst Alice Bogart, who wants a patent in a hurry. She has invented a pair of wings, so she can fly home since "The Chattanooga Choo-Choo" has ceased to operate. Request granted!

With no more interruptions the two reach the sidewalk and start for home. As they pass the bus station whom should they see alighting from the third floor of a most modern bus but Rose Anne Jordan. Heavens! a man has rushed up to her crying, "Helen, Helen darling!" Before our startled eyes Rosie is put into a green car with the boy's mother and carried away.

Puzzling over this occurrence, Duty and Nancy walk on. Soon they approach a large group of strong, healthy men. In the center of this group is none other than Sybil Cameron, batting those big brown eyes. Can she be captivating a star football team for Duke?

Just as the traffic light turns red and the executives start to cross the street, a familiar green car drives up. The window is open and the conversation can be heard plainly. "Why you aren't Helen," the man is saying. He has pulled out a gun. "Get out!" Rosie is too frightened to move. But what's this? Brave little Ruth Harrison, vice-president in charge of preserving the quiet, rushes up and whispers, "Stop! Loud noises are not permitted." Rosie is saved!

Now the day is almost over. But not quite, for up the street they see M. C. Bracken coming out of a movie. She looks thin and tired and explains that she has been in the theatre for the last three days watching Lon McAllister. Nancy and Duty say they have not seen the movie, and M. C. gives them a reproving glance before going away.

All of a sudden the air is shattered by the screaming of sirens. Nancy and Duty fear that M. C. has passed out and an ambulance has come for her; but no! The sirens belong to a fire engine. However, as the fire engine is not going their way, the girls continue homeward and arrive without further excitement. But as they prepare a snack before going to bed, they happen to turn on the radio and hear an announcer saying, "We are interrupting this program to bring you news of the late accident. Miss Margaret McIlwaine by chance struck her head into an oven filled with gas fumes, and her hair caused an explosion. Miss McIlwaine was blown into the air although uninjured. She has not come down yet; but never fear, ladies and gentlemen, the firemen have the net ready." So ends a busy day!

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

State of North Carolina,
County of Forsyth,
City of Winston-Salem.
To Whom It May Concern:

We, the class of nineteen hundred forty-five, being supposedly of sound mind and body and realizing the uncertainty of this life, do hereby publish and declare this to be our last will and testament.

ARTICLE I

To the faculty we leave our appreciation for their helpful instruction and loving guidance.

ARTICLE II

To the coming Senior Class we leave our beloved privileges and honor study halls, hoping that they will mean as much to them as they have meant to us.

ARTICLE III

Jean Roberts wills her "blushing beauty" to Anne English.

"Babe" Ruth Adams wills her softball glove to Nancy Hunt.

Jerry Worsham (pronounced "Woisham") wills her "Holps" to Betty Reeder.

Harriet Atwood bequeaths her "Stocking Ad" legs to Patsy Chambers.

Lindsay (W. S. S. F.) Tate wills her songs and slogans to Sara Jeanne Pierle.

Ruth Womble gives her Duke pennants to Elizabeth Currie.

Margaret McIlwaine donates her 150-watt bulb to Miss Knowles.

Nona McClure wills her shuffle-hop-shuffle steps to Nancy Jarrett.

Nancy Hammond gives her begonia plants to Nancy Bryan.

Alice Bogart bequeaths her cupid qualities (are they working, Wayne?) to Martha Murdock.

Rose Anne Jordan wills her "biddybrain" experiences to Elsie Shaw. (Moral: Don't follow astrology books!)

Barbara Barnes imparts her fatigue suit to Doug Rushton with the hope that she will never be able to fit it.

Bettie wills her "Longreaches" in basketball and on the piano to Skeeter Phillips.

Jean ("Daydreamer") Dunlap bequeaths her pigtails to Cissie Geitner.

Mary Lou Fields leaves her proofs to Mary Akers. She never wants to see another one.

Marianna Moore gives her jewelry tool box to Joyce Harley.

M. C. Bracken leaves her bell-bottom trousers and sailor's hat to Nancy Bracken.

Gene Starcher bequeaths her ice cream key to Mary Ruth Monger.

Sybil Cameron wills her "Song and Dance Routines" to Betty Crawford.

Mary Louise wills her Powe-ly made sweaters to Althea Cekada.

Skippy Pfanstiehl bequeaths her human pitch pipe to Betty Ligon.

Pat Shull leaves her columnist chores to Erd McCuiston.

Betty Duty gives "Clarabelle," to football, to Ethel Baumann and Sarah Blakemore.

Ruth ("Ump") Harrison leaves her referee's whistle to Eleanor Rose.

Mary Lynn Hoga wills her Van Johnson pictures to—no, she changed her mind!

Helen Kahn bequeaths her love of red, particularly red rugs, to Jill Olds.

Betty Irby leaves her aunt's address to all Toll House cookie lovers.

Betsy Smith-Vaniz wills her incense to Lynn Davidson.

Jean Strickland wills her "Strookland" accent to Maryann Rogers.

ARTICLE IV

We hereunto set our signatures and affix the seal on this, the fifth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

ALMA MATER

School of ages, still aspiring,
School of fame;
Mothers, daughters seek to honor
Thy great name;
Salem, may we true and loyal ever be;
Salem, may you hear our singing—
Love we're bringing all to thee.
School of ages, thy great spirit
Gives us power
To make free and joyous progress
Hour by hour
Honor, splendor, love and glory thine shall be;
Through our lives will shine thy blessing
Alma Mater, hail to thee.

When Silver is Shining

in your hair and golden memories are stirred in your heart by the pages of this, your yearbook, these words will be full of meaning. Just as they are today, just as they were four score years ago when they were uttered by a tall man on a Pennsylvania hill one chilly November afternoon:

“IT is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.”
